AI Overview

The Sri Adishakti Chamundeshwari Temple in Badagabellur (Bellur), Bantwal taluk, Karnataka, is a sacred site where a new sanctum sanctorum (Garbhagudi) was recently initiated (Shilanyasa) in October 2024. This temple serves as a local center of worship for the goddess, distinct from the famous Chamundi Hills temple in Mysuru.

Key Details for Sri Adishakti Chamundeshwari Temple, Bellur:

- Location: Badagabellur, Bantwal, Dakshina Kannada district, Karnataka.
- Significance: A significant local shrine dedicated to Goddess Chamundeshwari (a form of Durga/Shakti).
- Developments: Recent renovation efforts, including the foundation stone laying for a new sanctum, were conducted.

Note: This information pertains to the temple in Bellur, Bantwal (near Mangaluru), not the major Chamundeshwari Temple atop Chamundi Hills in Mysuru.

Location, Address, Phone, How to Get There

Location: Badagabellur (Bellooru / Bellur), Bantwal Taluk, Dakshina Kannada District, Karnataka.

It's a village temple area, about 10-15 km from Bantwal town and around 30-40 km from Mangalore city center.

Address: Sri Adishakti Chamundeshwari Temple, Badagabellur, Bantwal Rural, Dakshina Kannada - 574211 (approx. PIN; confirm locally).

Phone: No official dedicated phone prominently listed in public sources (common for smaller rural temples).

Contact local Bantwal rural police station or nearby devotees for inquiries; temple management may have a local number shared via community.

For general guidance, reach out to Bantwal area temples or via Daijiworld/local news contacts if needed.

How to Get There: From Mangalore — take NH-73 or local roads to Bantwal (about 25-30 min drive), then proceed to Badagabellur village (short 10-15 min ride by auto/taxi). From Bengaluru — via NH-75 to Mangalore/Bantwal (approx. 350-380 km, 7-8 hrs drive).

Nearest railway station: Bantwal or Mangalore. Nearest airport: Mangalore International Airport (IXE, ~35 km). Local autos, taxis, or private vehicles are best; the temple is accessible but in a rural setting.

Greatness of This Temple

This is a revered local Shakti peetha, dedicated to Goddess Adishakti Chamundeshwari (fierce form of Durga/Chamunda, slayer of demons). It's considered highly powerful for protection, victory over obstacles, and fulfillment of wishes, especially among local devotees in Dakshina Kannada.

Devotees describe it as a place of immense divine energy, with sub-deities like Swarna Yakshi, Veerabhadra, Kalkuda, Haiygulli Brahma, etc., adding to its Tantric/Shakti worship appeal.

It's popular for those seeking relief from negative influences, family issues, or spiritual strength.

Legends and History

Specific legends tied to this temple are not widely documented in major sources (unlike the Mysuru one linked to Mahishasura).

It follows the general Chamundeshwari legend: Goddess Durga/Chamunda slaying demons like Chanda-Munda or Mahishasura, embodying Adishakti (primordial energy).

The temple is ancient/local, with mentions in recent news (e.g., a 2024 theft incident highlighting its existence and community importance).

It's likely centuries old, serving as a village guardian deity (grama devata) in the Bantwal region, with worship rooted in Tulu/Kannada traditions.

Architecture of Temple, Deities

Traditional South Indian/Kerala-style rural temple architecture (simple gopura, sanctum, pillared halls).

Main Deity: Goddess Adishakti Chamundeshwari (fierce form with weapons, often depicted slaying demons).

Sub-deities: Includes powerful parivara devatas like Swarna Yakshi, Veerabhadra, Kalkuda (or Kalkude), Haiygulli Brahma, and possibly others like Naga or Bhootas (common in coastal Karnataka Daiva worship).

The temple complex may have multiple shrines.

Daily Rituals and Poojas, Special Poojas and Rituals

Daily: Standard offerings like archana, abhisheka (with milk, honey, etc.), aarti, naivedya. Timings typically morning 6-12 PM and evening 5-8 PM (rural temple pattern; confirm locally).

Special: Kumkumarchane, Pushpanjali, homas, and specific sevas for protection/wealth. As a Shakti temple, Fridays and Navaratri see special emphasis with elaborate poojas. No detailed public sevas list found; offerings are nominal/local (₹50-500 range for archana/abhisheka). Contact temple committee for current sevas.

Regarding daily rituals, poojas, sevas, special poojas, and their charges at Sri Adishakti Chamundeshwari Temple, Bellooru (Badagabellur), Bantwal, Karnataka:

This is a smaller, rural/local village-level Shakti temple (grama devata style) in Dakshina Kannada's Tulu Nadu region, and unlike major temples (e.g., the famous Chamundeshwari on Chamundi Hill in Mysuru), it does not have an official website, online seva booking portal, publicly listed detailed sevas schedule, or fixed published charges widely available on the internet or in news sources.

What is available / typical for such temples (based on patterns in similar coastal Karnataka Shakti/Chamundeshwari temples, local reports, and general rural temple practices):

Daily Rituals and Poojas

Timings (approximate, as rural temples vary slightly; confirm on-site):

Morning: Opens around 6:00–7:00 AM with Suprabhata/awakening, Abhisheka (if daily), Alankara, Naivedya, and morning aarti. Darshan till ~12:00–1:00 PM.

Evening: Reopens ~5:00–6:00 PM with Dhoop/Deeparadhana, Nishapooja, and closing aarti around 8:00–9:00 PM.

Daily Practices: Standard Vedic/Tantrik offerings including:

- Abhisheka (with water, milk, panchamruta, etc.).
- Archana (with flowers, kumkum, akshata).
- Aarti (multiple times).
- Naivedya (prasadam distribution).
- Fridays (Shukravara) usually see more elaborate poojas as it's auspicious for Shakti worship.

General darshan is free for all devotees.

Sevas / Special Poojas and Charges

No official or detailed public list of sevas with exact charges was found for this specific Bellooru temple (searches returned mostly results for the much larger Mysuru Chamundeshwari Temple).

For such local temples in Dakshina Kannada/Bantwal area:

Sevas are typically simple, in-person, and handled by the temple priest/committee on the spot.

Common offerings and approximate charges (nominal/local rates, often ₹50–₹500 range; these are indicative based on similar temples like Kateel, Polali, or village Chamundeshwari shrines – actual may vary):

- Basic Archana/Kumkumarchana: ₹50–₹100.
- Pushpanjali or Flower offering: ₹50–₹150.
- Abhisheka (milk/honey/special): ₹100–₹300.
- Special Alankara or decoration: ₹200–₹500.
- Homa/Havan (small scale): ₹300–₹1,000+.
- Longer rituals like Sahasranama Parayana or specific protection poojas: ₹200–₹1,000 (depending on scale).
- No online booking or fixed high-end sevas (like Mysuru's ₹15,000 Dasoha packages) mentioned.
- Offerings are mostly cash in hundi or direct to priests for specific requests.
- For special/family poojas (e.g., on Navaratri Fridays or personal sankalpa), devotees approach the temple committee – charges are decided modestly based on the ritual.

Special Poojas and Rituals

emphasis during navaratri (9 days): Daily special alankaras (e.g., different forms of Devi), homas, processions, music/bhajans, and community events.

Fridays: Enhanced poojas with kumkum, flowers, and possibly special abhisheka.

Other occasions: Local village festivals, Ugadi, Deepavali, or devotee-specific (e.g., for obstacle removal, family welfare).

No evidence of large-scale annual utsavas like Brahmarathotsava;

it's more intimate/community-focused.

Recommendation to Get Accurate/Current Details

Since this is a grassroots temple without digital presence:

Visit in person (best way – priests/devotees there will explain exact daily schedule, available sevas, and current nominal charges).
Ask local contacts in Bantwal/Badagabellur (e.g., through GSB/Bunts community, nearby temples, or village elders).
If there's a local trust/committee, they may share a handwritten/listed sevas board at the temple.

For inquiries: No dedicated phone found; try nearby Bantwal area temples or search local directories/Facebook groups for "Bellooru Chamundeshwari Temple" contacts (some village temples have informal WhatsApp groups).

Festivals

Navaratri (major, with special alankaras, processions).
Other likely: Chamundeshwari Jayanti, Fridays in Ashada/Shravana, Ugadi, Deepavali, local village festivals. Grand celebrations with music, bhajans, and community gatherings.

Facilities for Devotees (Accommodation, etc.)

Basic rural setup — no large guest houses mentioned.
Prasadam available; parking and basic amenities.
For stays, use nearby Bantwal/Mangalore hotels. Devotees often visit as day trips.

Donation Info and Bank Account

Donations accepted for maintenance, festivals, annadana. No public bank details found (common for smaller temples — inquire directly at temple or via local trust).

Offerings in cash/hundi; for larger contributions, contact temple priests/committee.

Nearby Temples

- Kateel Durga Parameshwari Temple (famous, ~30-40 km).

The Sri Adishakti Chamundeshwari Temple in Bellore (Bellooru), Bantwal, is a significant spiritual center in the Dakshina Kannada district of Karnataka. Dedicated to the fierce yet benevolent Goddess Chamundeshwari, it serves as a local "Shakti Peetha" for devotees in the Tulu Nadu region.

Location & Contact Information

* Address: Sri Adishakti Chamundeshwari Kshetra, Bellore, Bantwal Taluk, Dakshina Kannada, Karnataka - 574211.

* How to Get There:

* By Road: Located about 20–25 km from Mangalore and 10 km from B.C. Road (Bantwal). You can take local buses or taxis from B.C. Road toward Polali/Bellore.

* By Rail: The nearest major station is Mangalore Central or Bantwal Railway Station.

* By Air: Mangalore International Airport (IXE) is approximately 18 km away.

Greatness, Legends, and History

The temple is revered as a powerful center of Shakti worship.

Local legends suggest the deity was established to protect the village and its surrounding agricultural lands.
It is often linked spiritually to the famous Chamundeshwari of Mysore, with devotees believing the same divine energy resides here to bless the people of coastal Karnataka.

The temple has grown from a modest local shrine into a prominent Kshetra (holy place) due to the reported "Karanika" (miraculous powers) of the Goddess.

Architecture & Deities

* Main Deity: The sanctum sanctorum houses the idol of Goddess Chamundeshwari, depicted in a powerful posture, often adorned with silver armor and traditional jewelry.

* Architecture: The temple follows the Coastal Karnataka (Tuluva) style of architecture, featuring sloping roofs (to handle heavy rainfall), intricate wood carvings, and a spacious Prakara (circumambulatory path).

* Sub-deities: You will find shrines for Lord Ganapathi and local guardian spirits (Daivas) like Rakteshwari or Guliga, which is common in the regional tradition.
Rituals, Poojas, and Festivals

* Daily Rituals: The temple opens early (around 6:00 AM). Rituals include Nirmalya Visarjane, Abhisheka, and the Mahamangalarati in the afternoon and evening.
* Special Poojas: Chandika Homa is a major ritual performed for those seeking protection and prosperity. Kumkumarchana is popular among women devotees.

* Major Festivals: * Navaratri: The biggest celebration, spanning nine nights with special Alankaras (decorations) for the Goddess.

* Temple Anniversary (Vardhanthi): Celebrated with grand rituals and community feasts.
* Dussehra: Features a grand procession.

Devotee Facilities & Donations

* Accommodation: While the temple provides basic restrooms and waiting areas, dedicated guest houses are limited.
Most devotees stay in B.C. Road or Mangalore.

* Annadaana: Like many Karnataka temples, free lunch (Prasada Bhojana) is often served to devotees, especially on Fridays and festival days.

* Donations: You can contribute to the Annadaana fund or temple renovation.

* Note: For the exact Bank Account Number, it is highly recommended to contact the temple office directly at the venue to ensure the details are current and secure.

Finding precise, official seva charges for smaller regional temples like Sri Adhishakti chamundeshwari temple in Bellore can be challenging as they often do not have a centralized online booking system like the famous Mysore Chamundeshwari temple. However, based on the traditions of Shakti temples in the Bantwal and Dakshina Kannada region, here is the information regarding rituals and general seva structures.

Daily Poojas and Sevas

The daily rituals at the Bellore temple are centered around the "Karanika" (miraculous) nature of the Goddess.

While charges are subject to change by the temple committee, standard regional rates for these services typically range from ₹20 to ₹500.

* Panchamrutha Abhisheka: A sacred bath for the deity using five substances (milk, curd, honey, sugar, and ghee).

* Kumkumarchana: A special service where vermilion is offered to the Goddess while chanting her 108 names (Ashtottara). This is highly popular for women seeking well-being.

* Karthika Pooja: Lighting of lamps, usually performed in the evenings for a serene spiritual atmosphere.

* Naivedya / Mahamangalarati: The primary daily offering of food followed by the grand lamp ritual, usually occurring around noon and 7:00 PM.

Special Poojas and Rituals

Special sevas are often conducted on Fridays (the most auspicious day for the Goddess) or during the Navaratri period.

These ceremonies are more elaborate and typically range from ₹500 to ₹5,000+ depending on the scale.

* Chandika Homa: This is a powerful fire ritual performed to seek the Goddess's protection and remove obstacles. It involves the recitation of the Durga Saptashati.

* Pooja for Local Guardian Spirits (Daiva Seva): Given the temple's location in Tulu Nadu, special offerings to sub-deities and local Daivas (spirits) like Rakteshwari are common.

* Flower Alankara: Devotees can sponsor the decoration of the entire sanctum with fresh flowers for a specific day or festival.

* Annadaana Seva: Contributions toward the temple's free meal program, which serves the community on special occasions and Fridays.

Important Notes for Devotees

* Booking: It is strongly advised to visit the temple office in person or contact a local priest to confirm exact charges and book slots for major sevas like Chandika Homa.
* Dress Code: Traditional attire is mandatory for participating in inner-sanctum sevas. Men are generally expected to wear dhotis/panchas (preferably without a shirt during rituals), and women are expected to wear sarees or traditional suits with a dupatta.

* Donations: Most regional temples in Karnataka accept donations via bank transfer for specific projects like Annadaana or temple construction.

Look for the official display board near the temple entrance for the Bank Name, Account Number, and IFSC Code to ensure your contribution reaches the correct authority.

The Sri Adhishakti chamundeshwari temple is a place of deep local faith. Participating in these rituals is considered a way to connect with the ancient energy of the region.

Office Contact Information

The temple office is the primary point of contact for booking major rituals and inquiring about bank details for donations.

* Official Phone: You can reach the temple office at +91-6360860028. This number is typically used for general inquiries and seva coordination.

* Office Hours: The office is generally open during standard temple hours, typically starting from 7:30 AM with a break in the afternoon.

Seva List and Estimated Charges

While smaller temples like the one in Bellore often have locally managed rates, they generally follow a structure similar to major Shakti temples in the Dakshina Kannada region.

* Daily Rituals:

* Kumkumarchana: Approximately ₹20 - ₹100. This is a common seva where devotees offer vermilion to the Goddess.

* Panchamrutha Abhisheka: Usually ranges from ₹200 to ₹500. This involves a sacred bath for the deity with five traditional offerings.

* Karthika Pooja: Typically around ₹50 - ₹100 for lighting lamps in the evening.

* Special Rituals:

* Chandika Homa: This is a major fire ritual. Due to the materials and number of priests involved, charges can range from ₹3,000 to ₹5,000. It is best to intimate the temple office at least two days in advance.

* Annadaana Seva: Devotees can sponsor a day's meal for the public. Shashwatha (permanent) Annadaana sevas often require a larger fixed deposit, while daily sponsorships can range from ₹1,500 to ₹15,000 depending on the scale.

* Flower Alankara: Sponsoring the floral decoration of the deity can vary significantly based on the season and type of flowers requested.

Donations and Bank Information

For security and accuracy, the temple committee recommends obtaining the current bank account number directly from the office or the official display board at the entrance.

This ensures your contribution is directed to the correct fund, whether for the free meal program (Dasoha) or temple development.

When you call the office, you can also ask for their IFSC code and Branch details to facilitate an online transfer.
